

Up to 70% of the threat to a company's integrity comes from within the company

Chilling isn't it?

Traditional information security solutions are focused on protecting information and data integrity against misuses and attacks from the outside. In today's world most critical corporate and customer information sits on internal servers and databases rather than on PCs or elsewhere on the network. Research studies have consistently shown that the problem often lies deeper in an organisation and that the greatest threat to a company's information integrity is internal.

Assuria's solutions focus solely on helping corporations protect themselves from within the perimeter. Our industry leading information security software and its related support services help companies to sleep easy at night and fulfill their statutory obligations to protect their information assets. Over 350 major enterprises around the world, including many of the world's largest banks rely on Assuria to protect them from the internal threat. Heartwarming isn't it?

If you'd like further information about Assuria or if you would like to become a reseller, please go to www.assuria.com/chilling

assuria (A)
Information Risk Management